Microscopy-Based Technique: • IHC is a powerful microscopy-based method. • It reveals the existence and localization of target proteins, providing an intuitive visual output. 3. Applications in Tumor Characterization: • IHC is commonly used for morphological characterization of tumors and tissue malignancies. • Researchers can study protein expression patterns and understand disease processes. IHC plays a crucial role in understanding cellular behavior and disease pathology! E-certificates were given to all the participants.

Background/Introduction A medical emergency in dental office may be an unexpected event that can include accidental or willful bodily injury, central nervous system stimulation and depression, respiratory and circulatory disturbances, as well as allergic reactions. Dentists, through their academic, clinical and continuing education, should be familiar with prevention, diagnosis and management of common emergencies. Every dentist should have the basic knowledge to recognise, assess and manage a potentially life-threatening situation until the patient can be transported to a medical facility. Successful patient management relies on understanding the pathophysiologic processes and how to correct them. Keep in mind that some emergencies and in disaster even in hospitals where there is optimal management. People have heart attacks every day — they may just happen to be in your office at the time. You need to know what to do in order to give the patient the best chance of recovery.

2.	Background/Introduction Dental age (DA) estimations in children are based on clinical examinations that include recordings of tooth eruption or observations of the tooth formation stages using radiographs. One of the most widely applied methods is the Demirjian's system, which was first described in 1973 and was based on a sample of French-Canadian children. Demirjian's method is theoretically based on eight developmental stages ranging from crown and root formation to apex closure of the seven left permanent mandibular teeth. The score of each stage is allocated, and the sum of the scores provides an evaluation of the subject's dental maturity. The dental maturity score (DMS) can be converted into the DA using available tables.
